MERCURIUS – SERVING SCHOOLS WORLDWIDE

Mercurius is the leading provider of supplies to Waldorf schools, kindergartens, and other Waldorf-inspired initiatives. With almost 30 years of experience serving educators around the world, we have developed a unique selection of products specially tailored to the needs of Waldorf schools and teachers.

Throughout the years since our founding, Mercurius has developed an unmatched degree of knowledge and expertise. While we are proud of our history, we eagerly embrace the future, working every day with our customers to find ways to tailor our offerings to their changing needs. Our commitment to schools, teachers, and students is to ensure that our products are always accessible, appropriate, and affordable.

INCLUSION & COLLABORATION

Social inclusion and mutually-beneficial collaboration are fundamental principles at Mercurius. Accordingly, we strive to source products and services from organizations that employ people with disabilities, as well as from other vendors whose social and environmental principles align with ours.

ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE

Mercurius is wholly-owned by the Neuguss Foundation, based in Berlin, Germany. Neuguss was created by Alfred Rexroth, a German entrepreneur, to own and operate businesses for community benefit. Neuguss does this by insuring that its businesses pursue strategies described by Rexroth as “balanced between business goals, the interest of employees, and the welfare of the general public.” This unique ownership structure and guiding philosophy means that Mercurius is fundamentally committed to values shared with our customers, bringing us closer in our daily work, and enabling a level of collaboration not often found in business relationships.

COOPERATION WITH SHELTERED WORK PLACES

One of Mercurius's key principles is social inclusion. Accordingly, we strive to source products and services from organizations that employ people with disabilities. Many of these products are hand-made and imbued with especially high levels of quality and unique character. Our support makes a real difference for these organizations.

INTERNATIONAL COLLABORATION AND COOPERATION WITH SUPPLIERS

We collaborate closely with our suppliers to ensure that the various needs of all parties are met, with a view toward creating long-term relationships that are mutually beneficial. Our business and support makes a real difference for these organizations, the people with and without disabilities they employ, and, ultimately, for our customers who can be assured that Mercurius's social principles are actively implemented in the process of providing them the products they need.

Painting boards

Plant watercolours

Children are artists by nature. They paint and draw with delight and enthusiasm. The joy of creating and, as a result, the expression of self through pictures is what is most important. The material is just as important as the right environment and encouragement to paint. Watercolours with high luminosity and purity, high quality artist brushes, as well as the ideal paper, supports artistic creativity.

Playing outside

Young children have important sensory experiences during playtime. When playing with solid wood, a child senses its weight, solidity, texture and the natural variance of the material.

Pentatonic flutes

Diatonic flutes

Tambourines

Harps

Xylophone blocks

Lyres

Because children live so completely in the world of the senses, hearing and creating music are important activities for their development. Young children respond well to pentatonic instruments and to the open, tender tones of harps and lyres. As children grow, creating music with the head, heart, and hands, is a great activity for integrating many skills. When students make music together, they are also involved in social activity.
